(1) The valuation techniques used to measure the fair values of the Company's Level 2 financial instruments, which generally have counterparties with high credit ratings, are based on quoted market prices or model-driven valuations using significant inputs derived from or corroborated by observable market data.

As of June 27, 2026, 81% of the Company's non-current marketable debt securities other than mortgage- and asset-backed securities had maturities between 1 and 5 years, 16% between 5 and 10 years, and 3% greater than 10 years. As of June 27, 2026, 14% of the Company's non-current mortgage- and asset-backed securities had maturities between 1 and 5 years, 21% between 5 and 10 years, and 65% greater than 10 years.

Derivative Instruments and Hedging

The Company may use derivative instruments to partially offset its business exposure to foreign exchange and interest rate risk. However, the Company may choose not to hedge certain exposures for a variety of reasons, including accounting considerations or the prohibitive economic cost of hedging particular exposures. There can be no assurance the hedges will offset more than a portion of the financial impact resulting from movements in foreign exchange or interest rates.

Foreign Exchange Rate Risk

To protect gross margins from fluctuations in foreign exchange rates, the Company may use forwards, options or other instruments, and may designate these instruments as cash flow hedges. The Company generally hedges portions of its forecasted foreign currency exposure associated with revenue and inventory purchases, typically for up to 12 months.

To protect the Company's foreign currency–denominated term debt or marketable securities from fluctuations in foreign exchange rates, the Company may use forwards, cross-currency swaps or other instruments. The Company designates these instruments as either cash flow or fair value hedges. As of June 27, 2026, the maximum length of time over which the Company is hedging its exposure to the variability in future cash flows for term debt–related foreign currency transactions is 16 years.

The Company may also use derivative instruments that are not designated as accounting hedges to protect gross margins from certain fluctuations in foreign exchange rates, as well as to offset a portion of the foreign currency gains and losses generated by the remeasurement of certain assets and liabilities denominated in non-functional currencies.

Interest Rate Risk

To protect the Company's term debt or marketable securities from fluctuations in interest rates, the Company may use interest rate swaps, options or other instruments. The Company designates these instruments as either cash flow or fair value hedges.

The notional amounts of the Company's outstanding derivative instruments as of June 27, 2026 and September 27, 2025, were as follows (in millions):

	June 27, 2026	September 27, 2025
Derivative instruments designated as accounting hedges:
Foreign exchange contracts	$ 61,313	$ 62,647
Interest rate contracts	$ 10,625	$ 12,875
Derivative instruments not designated as accounting hedges:
Foreign exchange contracts	$ 64,053	$ 109,079

As of June 27, 2026 and September 27, 2025, the carrying amount of the Company's current and non-current term debt subject to fair value hedges was $10.4 billion and $12.6 billion, respectively.

Accounts Receivable

Trade Receivables

As of both June 27, 2026 and September 27, 2025, the Company had one customer that represented 10% or more of total trade receivables, which accounted for 18% and 12%, respectively. The Company's third-party cellular network carriers accounted for 27% and 34% of total trade receivables as of June 27, 2026 and September 27, 2025, respectively. The Company requires third-party credit support or collateral from certain customers to limit credit risk.

Vendor Non-Trade Receivables

The Company has non-trade receivables from certain of its manufacturing vendors resulting from the sale of components to these vendors who manufacture subassemblies or assemble final products for the Company. The Company purchases these components directly from suppliers. The Company does not reflect the sale of these components in products net sales. Rather, the Company recognizes any gain on these sales as a reduction of products cost of sales when the related final products are sold by the Company. As of June 27, 2026, the Company had two vendors that individually represented 10% or more of total vendor non-trade receivables, which accounted for 47% and 22%. As of September 27, 2025, the Company had two vendors that individually represented 10% or more of total vendor non-trade receivables, which accounted for 46% and 23%.
